EXPRESSIONS '76

A Pictorial Essay

Each of us creates a history: that which we have done; and the momentum of our own history leads us on to constantly explore that which we can do. We react to the history being created around us–corruption in the national government, war in the Middle East, racial conflict in Boston. We react to changes in ourselves, and our relationships with others. If we have created memories here, then we have made history. If we have come to know and value ourselves more, that is historic, for we have opened our minds, and ideas and emotions have emerged. The effect that these ideas and emotions have had and will have is impossible to measure. Our history is one of expressions; the way we express ourselves, and inevitably we express ourselves as women. Our history is one of individual women creating and learning, from books and from each other. This book is a history of a time that has gone by. Doors can sometimes be difficult to close, and the sadness of goodbyes can cause one to regret their closing. However . . .
